Since 1957, Japan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs has released an annual report, called "Diplomatic Bluebook," on the country's foreign policy.

In this year's report, Japan dedicated a section to the Middle East and North Africa region where it highlighted the importance of the Maghreb. "The Maghreb is of great economic importance in the African continent, due to its geographical advantage of being the crossroads of Europe, the Middle East, and Africa, and its high potential based on a cheap abundant young labor force," said the report.

Strengthening the Economic Relations

In January 2020, Japan’s State Minister for Foreign Affairs Takako Suzuki attended the 10th session of the Japan-Morocco Joint Committee, during which the representative of both countries discussed the implementation of bilateral cooperation in different sectors.

One month later, Japan’s Parliamentary Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs Nakatani visited Morocco as the head of the Public and Private Sector Joint Mission for Prom Trade and Investment in Africa.

During the visit, Shinichi reaffirmed Japan’s “non-recognition of any separatist entity to the Moroccan aspect of the Sahara.” He said, “Japan does not recognize Western a state.”

In efforts to develop bilateral cooperation, the two countries signed in March 2021 a Memorandum of Cooperation on land-use planning, town planning, infrastructure, and investment, which was a first.

A few months later, Morocco’s House of Representatives Speaker Rachid Talbi Alami met with Japanese Ambassador to Morocco Shinozuka Takashi in November 2021. The two parties committed to strengthening bilateral and multilateral parliamentary cooperation between their respective countries.

Japanese continuous efforts to reinforce diplomatic and economic relations with the North African country align with the “Japan in Africa” vision.

As it considers the continent “the greatest frontier of the 21st century,” Japan seeks to build bilateral relations with African countries based on “quality growth and human security.”

In 1993, Japan established the Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD) “to promote high-level policy dialogue between African leaders and development partners [such as] the United Nations, United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the World Bank, and the African Union Commission (AUC),” according to the Japanese government’s website.

As Japan continues to expand its economic and political sphere of influence in Africa, Morocco
